

URBAN MOTORCYCLING:

I ♥ NEW YORK

MORE THAN EVER

By Richard J. Atkins #93162

“If you have friends or family who were planning on coming to New York City in the near future, tell them to come now. Not only will they have a great time at our world-renowned restaurants, shops, museums, ballparks and theaters, but they will be making an important statement that terrorists cannot stop us from being the land of the free and the home of the brave.”—Former Mayor Rudy Giuliani, NYC

I ♥ NEW YORK

Many of the rides and descriptions of journeys for motorcycles focus on areas of natural beauty. A host of tours can be found for the Grand Canyon, the Pacific Coast, Yellowstone and others. This article takes a different twist: motorcycling in the city. Following urgings from former New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, current Mayor Mike Bloomberg, State Governor George Pataki, and President George W. Bush, New York welcomes Big Apple tourism now more than ever. Remember, every dollar spent in New York is one more dollar for rebuilding.

The City of New York, still smarting from an open wound, has begun its slow journey toward recovery. Manhattan's injury is healing. The scar, however, will remain forever. Despite that fact, the spirit of her people continues to shine like sunlight through the clouds. The citizens' strength and the city's beauty have fostered rebirth and renewal. With all that said, it's time to pack the saddlebags and remember that with a little preparation, New York can be motorcycle-friendly.

The starting point for this journey is on the Grand Central Parkway where it intersects the Long Island Expressway. As we cruise west toward the city, the route takes us past Flushing Meadow—Corona Park, home to the World's Fair of 1939-40, and 1964-65. Originally the Corona ash dump. F. Scott Fitzgerald described this locale as the "Valley of Ashes" in his novel, The Great Gatsby. The park boasts the 700,000-pound "Unisphere," a stainless steel, 140-foot high and 120-foot diameter model of the earth. Its inscription reads, "Dedicated to man's aspirations toward peace through mutual understanding and symbolizing his achievements in an expanding universe." The park also has two lakes, the site of the U.S. Open—Arthur Ashe Stadium, and Shea Stadium, home to the New York Mets. Continue on and look for LaGuardia Airport, formerly an amusement park, on the right.

Riding a few miles further, we enter the longest span of the Triborough Bridge, one of three bridges that meet on Randall's Island and connect the boroughs of Manhattan, Queens and the Bronx. To get a flavor of Spanish Harlem and Harlem, take 125th Street (Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Boulevard) across town. Between Adam Clayton Powell, Jr. Boulevard and Frederick Douglass Boulevard, pass by the Apollo Theater on the right. Names like Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Ella Fitzgerald, the Jackson 5, and James Brown can all attribute some of their success to this theater. Go through Roosevelt Square and turn left on Broadway. Pass through Columbia University, founded in 1754 as well as Barnard College.

Turn left on 114th Street and right on Amsterdam Avenue. On the left, we find the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, the largest Gothic Cathedral in the nation. Take note of the great columns and more than 150 stained glass windows. Within the gardens and grounds is a magnificent statue of the Archangel Michael's slaying of Satan.

Turn left on 110th Street and then cruise south by making a right on Central Park West. Central Park is a National Historical and New York City Landmark. Yearly, more than 20 million people visit the 843 acres that stretch from 59th to 110th Streets. On our right at 79th Street, The American Museum of Natural History, home to the Rose Center for Earth and Space featuring the Hayden Planetarium can be found. Make a right at 72nd Street and a left on Columbus Avenue.

Driving down Columbus, between 66th and 62nd Streets, will bring us to Lincoln Center on the right. This cultural hub is home to the Metropolitan Opera, Avery Fisher Hall, New York State Theater, and the Juilliard School. Take a left on 57th Street to pass by the Hard Rock Café on the left, and other tourist and shopping spots. Going right on Seventh Avenue, we pass by the famous Carnegie Hall on the left. Since 1891, Andrew and Arcade/skating rink at Rockefeller Center.

Louise Carnegie's performance tradition, as well as artists like Tchaikovsky, Mahler, Bernstein, Judy Garland and the Beatles have all helped shape the history of "America's most famous concert hall." Tours are available.

Riding past the Winter Garden Theater on the right, longtime home to Cats, Seventh Avenue, between 52nd and 40th Streets, brings us to Times Square, the "Crossroads of the World."

I ♥ NEW YORK

The revitalized Times Square boasts the former New York Times Building, from which the Square derives its name and the place where the New Year's Eve Ball drops. Also, we find the NASDAQ Building, MTV studios, and many others. Estimates claim that over 1.5 million people pass through this area each day to experience the over 200 restaurants, 600 stores and more action than human beings should be allowed to experience! The Times Square Visitors Center (212-768-1560) is located at 1560 Broadway, between 46th and 47th Streets.

After passing Macy's on the left (between 35th and 34th Streets), and Penn Station on the right, turn right on 31st Street. Then, make a right on 8th Avenue. On the right, admire Madison Square Garden. Across the Avenue is the New York General Post Office, which bears the famous inscription, "Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds." The Port Authority Bus terminal is on the left just before 42nd Street. Make a right on 46th Street, also known as "Restaurant Row." Then make a left on Sixth Avenue, also known as Avenue of the Americas.

Spanning from 48th to 51st Streets and between Sixth and Fifth Avenue

New York Public Library, 42nd & 5th.

Avenues, we encounter a two-acre complex of 19 buildings, the National and New York City landmark known as Rockefeller Center. From Fifth Avenue, the Channel Gardens Promenade ends with the arcade/skating rink, which is dominated by the world-famous Christmas tree from November through January. Year-round, view Paul Manship's 8-foot high bronze gilded Prometheus statue (1934), weighing 8 tons. The ring supporting him bears the signs of the cosmos. The offices, shops, restaurants, and broadcasting facilities of Rockefeller center are crowned at 50th street with the city's largest theater, Radio City Music Hall, home of the Rockettes. The Music Hall's Great Stage measures 66.5 feet deep and 144 feet wide. Its interior, a contemporary Art Deco design, resembles a rising sun.

Turn left on 53rd Street and then make a right on Eighth Avenue. Straight ahead, navigator and explorer Christopher Columbus is honored with a monument at the southwest corner of Central Park. Columbus Circle is named for this man who discovered America purely by accident and named it for another Italian—Amerigo Vespucci. Follow the circle halfway around and make a right on 59th Street.

Cruising across Central Park South, admire the edifices of plush hotels such as the Ritz-Carlton. Turn right on Park Avenue. Now we're facing the former Pan Am building, currently bearing the MetLife name. At 45th Street, enter Park Avenue's elevated roadway that brings us around the newly restored Grand Central Station. Within, we find beautiful architecture, shops, eateries and, with free admission, the New York Transit Museum. Stop by the information booth on the Grand Concourse for more information.

Driving under the Queensboro

Under the Brooklyn Bridge.

Bridge, Roosevelt Island is on our right in the middle of the East River. Through the years, the island has been used as a penitentiary and as a "Municipal Lunatic Asylum." The island's 1874 lighthouse overlooks Hellgate waters.

Simon & Garfunkel referred to the cantilevered 59th Street Bridge in their famous song, Feelin' Groovy. The Queensboro Bridge spans the East River between 59th Street in Manhattan and Long Island City in Queens. Coming into the city, the bridge provides breathtaking views of midtown, particularly the Empire State Building, the Chrysler Building, and the UN.

Exit the FDR at 96th Street and make a left. Turn left on Fifth Avenue, known at this point as, "Museum Mile," with Central Park now on the right. The Guggenheim Museum is on the left at 89th Street. Between 84th and 80th Streets is the Metropolitan Museum of Art. "The Met," completed in 1880, holds a vast collection. There are also guided tours, special exhibitions, concerts, lectures and other educational programs. The Central Park Zoo can be found in the low 60s just before Grand Army Plaza on the right. At this point, prepare to drive through "the shoppers' Fifth Avenue."

At 59th Street, take quick note of the world-famous FAO Schwartz toy store on the left and, on the right, Fifth Avenue's crown jewel, the Plaza Hotel. Travel only a few blocks down to 51st Street. On your left is St. Patrick's Cathedral, the largest Gothic Roman Catholic Cathedral in the United States. The Cathedral is home to three pipe organs and, under the high altar, the burial crypt of the Archbishops of New York. Between 51st and 50th Streets, facing the Cathedral, Lee Lawrie's spectacular "Atlas" statue welcomes visitors to 30 Rockefeller Plaza, the 38-story International Building.

Further down on the right, after crossing 42nd Street, is the New York Public Library, constructed in 1911. Visit the free exhibition areas and galleries or take a free, one-hour tour (212-869-8089). The great lions that guard the entrance were once called Leo Astor and Leo Lenox after Lord Astor and Lady Lenox who were founders of the library. More recently, the lions have been known as Patience and Fortitude.

At 34th Street, admire the tallest building in the city, the 102-floor Empire State Building. The top of this 1931 skyscraper has public viewing platforms and an interesting lighting system. The building can be illuminated in an array of color choices depending on the day, holiday or season.

The center of Greenwich Village is where Fifth Avenue ends, at Washington Square Park. Here, we are greeted with the hollowed-out Arch (similar to Arc de Triomphe in Paris), built in celebration of the 100th anniversary of George Washington's inauguration. NYU students, locals, and tourists flock to the fountain at the center of the park to be entertained by various performers.

Turn right on Washington Square North, left on Washington Square West/MacDougal Street and then left on Bleecker Street, where we find ourselves in the heart of the Greenwich Village music scene. Clubs such as Kenny's Castaways, The Back Fence, The Red Lion, and The Bitter End have been entertainment hot spots for years. Stop and take in some live music. Hungry for a snack? Turn right on LaGuardia Place, left on Houston Street and come to a stop at Ludlow Street for a Lower East Side hot dog, or more, at Katz's Delicatessen.

is very fitting that the area further down on the right is the site of what used to be the World Trade Center. Take a moment and give thanks to a few heroes. There are plenty of them all around. Also, please keep in mind that the wreckage of the World Trade Center is not a tourist attraction. Many now refer to it as "sacred ground." Please afford it the respect it commands.

A few blocks down Broadway from Canal Street, on the left, is City Hall. Restoration sought to bring the surrounding park back to its 18th-19th century condition. Note the refurbished clock tower as well as the Jacob Wrey Mould Fountain. South of the fountain is a nine-panel granite medallion that traces the history of City Hall Park from the 1600s through modern times. Construction of New York's City Hall took place between

Buildings in this area are plentiful and each deserves some attention. Promise to park and do some walking. Lower Manhattan houses Federal Plaza, the United States Courthouse, the Municipal Building, and One Police Plaza. Going down Broadway, we encounter Frank Winfield Woolworth's Building—the 1913 "Cathedral of Commerce," St. Paul's Chapel where George Washington was a regular, and the wooden pews of Trinity Church (1766). For the financially interested, visit Wall Street, the New York Stock Exchange (20 Broad Street), The American Stock Exchange (86 Trinity Place), and the Federal Reserve Bank (33 Liberty Street), just to name a few.

At the very tip of the island, Whitehall Terminal at Whitehall and South streets houses the Staten Island Ferry. The New York Harbor Ferry leaves from Battery Park and goes to the Statue of Liberty. Liberty Enlightening the World (the actual title of the 1886 statue) bears Emma Lazarus' inscription to those who pass Liberty Island: "Give me your tired, your poor, / Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free, / The wretched refuse of your teeming shore. / Send these, the homeless, tempest-tost to me, Empire State Building.

Katz's Deli.

/ I lift my lamp beside the golden door!” A few paces to the left will bring you to South Street Seaport, a veritable carnival of shopping, restaurants, and entertainment.

It’s time now to get back in the saddle and make a left from Broadway onto on Park Row. Stay to the left to end up on the Brooklyn Bridge. It costs nothing to cross, and no, it’s not for sale! Built over 100 years ago, the bridge closed the gap between Manhattan and the city of Brooklyn, which at the time was actually the third largest city in America. After entering Kings County we should find ourselves on Adams Street. Turn right On Atlantic Avenue and left on Court Street. On the right, stop at 238 Court Street and have a delicious Brooklyn-Italian dinner at Sam’s Restaurant. It’s a real treat when “Brooklyn Lou” is your waiter so ask for him! This will be an unforgettable New York meal. My wife, other friends, out of town guests, and I have feasted here numerous times and refused using the menu. Just ask Lou for his recommendations.

Didn’t have enough to eat today? Exit the LIE and turn left on 108th Street. Drive up to 52nd Avenue and visit The Lemon Ice King of Corona on the left. Since 1944, Peter Benfaremo has served delicious homemade ices. Across the street diagonally, enjoy dessert at William E. Moore Park, also known as “Spaghetti Alley.” On a warm night, the park is buzzing with some very serious bocce ball games and players.

And so our sample of New Amsterdam has ended. This one-time site of the Capital of the United States, as well as George Washington’s inauguration, offers a wealth of history. If all has gone well, the rider is stuffed full of food and ready for sleep. The City of New York offers lodging of all types, so make arrangements that are acceptable. Nassau and Suffolk Counties, on Long Island, also are replete with hotels. Having just taken an accelerated course of NYC 101, it might be best to get some well-earned rest and get out again tomorrow to explore this gem more.

NOTE: Before venturing on a motorcycle in a city, make sure you are up to the task. The path described in this article is a strenuous one. It demands that the rider be highly vigilant of the frequently unpredictable traffic that surrounds her or him on any city street. Clearly, this is not a route for the lackadaisical admirer of scenery. It requires knowledge of the itinerary as it is traveled. Make it easy for yourself—create short lists of directions and arrange to stop and park to see some of the terrific points of interest. Of critical importance is having a good, detailed map. Also, if you miss a turn or find that a street is closed, use your map to find an alternate. Things are not always predictable in Manhattan, so allow for variation in the route. Finally, this ride is just a sampler. The best way to do this is to take the route suggested here and break the journey into numerous days to allow time to experience the City of New York.
